Husky acquires Moldflow's Manufacturing Solutions Division

In late June 2007, Caledon-based Husky Injection Molding Systems Ltd. signed an agreement to acquire substantially all of the assets of Moldflow Corporation's Manufacturing Solutions Division for $7 million. Husky is one of the largest suppliers of hot runners and tooling for the injection molding industry.

Through this acquisition, Husky will expand its product offering, adding temperature controllers, process management and data communication software to its leading hot runner and machine portfolio.

"This transaction brings to Husky an experienced team, a wealth of technology expertise and a highly complementary set of innovative products," said Keith Carlton, Husky's Vice President of Hot Runners and PET Molds. "As a result, we will offer our customers greater value while continuing to grow this strategic area of our business."

"The acquisition of Moldflow's Manufacturing Solutions Division is consistent with our strategy of building a portfolio of leading products and services to better serve our customers," said John Galt, Husky's President and CEO. "By leveraging our industry leading service and sales network and our strong position in tooling, we will be able to deliver these innovative products to an expanded range of customers."

AMIS | Innovation in Ontario manufacturing

Did you know that Ontario has the second highest number of manufacturing employees of any jurisdiction in North America, after California? This is why Ontario manufacturers are being encouraged to invest in leading edge technologies and processes.

The Ontario Ministry of Economic Development & Trade has designed a strategic program to encourage companies to transform processes and adopt leading edge technologies that will increase their productivity and competitiveness.

The Advanced Manufacturing Investment Strategy (AMIS) is open to all sectors. Projects must, over five years, create/retain 100 or more high value jobs or have a minimum total project investment of $25 million. Eligible projects must be situated at facilities within Ontario and undertaken by companies that operate or will operate, by virtue of the project, in Ontario.
